NEW derivatives, commodities and investments should be made available to the general public, especially to the farmers, said VV Ganesan, Vice-President, National Commodities and Derivatives Exchange, here on Saturday.

Addressing at the National seminar on recent trends in commodities, derivatives and risk management' organised by the Department of Commerce and Financial Studies of Bharathidasan University and SMART Journal of Business Management Studies, Ganesan said, in the changing scenario of products and derivatives, 80 per cent of the commodities are marketed. When the banks were nationalised, every International banking procedure was formulated to suit Indian citizens, he said.

Dr S Janakiraman, Associate Professor, Head of Programmes (Finance) NUS University, Singapore, in his keynote address said, the price of a commodity and its supply were determined by the demand.

However, demand and supply are determined by the wholesalers. While the spot market fixed the spot price, the futures market fixed the future price that included the cost for the storage of commodities, he added.

Presiding over the seminar, Dr K Meena, Vice Chancellor, lauded the interactive method of teaching followed in the department. She said, investors could earn much through commodity derivatives like share market derivatives.

In his welcome address, Dr M Selvam, Head, said 80 per cent of students had got placement through campus interview so far and in the coming years, corporate companies would involve in campus interviews which, he hoped, would provide 100 per cent placement.

The Vice Chancellor also released a souvenir and Dr Bhooma Janakiraman received the first copy. Dr J Gayathri, Assistant Professor, proposed the vote of thanks.
